It is said that learning a new language at an early age is helpful for children. Would it be more positive for their future aspect or will it have some adverse effects instead by learning a new language at an early age. What is your opinion on this? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

Understanding multiple languages is always beneficial especially when traveling to relevant countries. In my opinion, learning a new language at an early age is very helpful for children. This is because when they grow up, they may be required to converse in multiple languages for business purposes and also when travel to other countries.

There are only a few selected countries in the world that are currently flourishing in the economy. Therefore, understanding the languages of these countries would definitely be beneficial to business if they plan to go international. For example, if an English company plans to expand to China, understand the Chinese language would be advantageous. It is also scientifically proven that learning a language at a younger age is easier.

It has also become a trend that many young people around the world prefer to travel instead of starting work as soon as they graduate. If these travelers understood the languages of the countries they plan to visit, it would definitely enhance their experience and also broaden their perspectives. For example, if a person visits Spain and understands Spanish, he would be able to order food and learn their culture easier. Furthermore, there are also no disadvantages to understanding more languages.

Although some people claim that learning multiple languages at an early age may confuse children, I believe that it is definitely doable with the right approach. Therefore, I strongly agree with the statement that learning a new language at an early age is helpful for children.
