It seems that nowadays TV has become an essential part of life. For some people, it is medium to spread news & awareness to others whereas for some others, it acts as a companion. What is your opinion on this? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

The television has become an essential in almost everybody's household. It serves multiple purposes, such as a medium to spread news and awareness to others, whereas some people treat it as a companion. In my opinion, people should utilize the benefits that television provides and not treat it as a companion.

Televisions give us access to numerous programs that are being broadcasted from all over the world. This includes news and entertainment programs. These programs allow us to keep up to date with occurrences all around the world and may even help us to make future plans. Furthermore, there are also education programs which are able to help kids in their learning.

However, some people may get too attached to their televisions as they become too engrossed with certain programs, specifically entertainment programs. This can cause people to spend their time unproductively and may even cause illnesses. This habit may also cause them to be antisocial which can affect their future careers.

In conclusion, although television has become an essential in every household because it has a lot of benefits, people must still use it wisely. It is not encouraged for a person to spend all his time watching television. He should utilize the benefits instead such as learning new things or keeping up to date with the news.
