It is said that for some developed countries, tourism may cause some disadvantages. To what extent do you agree or disagree with this? Support your point of view with details from your own experiences, observations or reading.

Tourism is a source of income for countries around the world. However, some people claim that tourism causes disadvantages such as overpopulation. I strongly disagree with the mentioned claim and believe that tourism brings nothing but benefits to a country. This is because tourism is a major source of income for governments and is also an opportunity to advertise the country's pride such as animals or culture.

Tourism generally refers to the industry where people across the world visit one country for a holiday. When tourists visit a country, they will tend to purchase local products and visit hotspots that will require spending. This will not only provide jobs for the locals but also allow the government to earn more income, leading to an increase in the country's economy.

Furthermore, tourism also allows visitors to experience a country's culture and food. If a tourist enjoyed his experience in a country, he may share his experiences with friends or colleagues and that may eventually lead to more visits from tourists. These visits will not only help the country's economy, but will also allow the country to be more known amongst the other countries in the world.

Although there is the possibility of tourism bringing some disadvantages such as overpopulation in a country, I believe that the advantages greatly outweigh the disadvantages. Therefore, countries should definitely put in effort to promote tourism.
